WHEN YOU'RE IN A HURRY . . .

The color code index is provided to help those who keep the Directory on their desk near the telephone and use it often.

With the color code, you can flip quickly to the exact section you want in the few seconds available between the time a call is announced and the time you answer.

Now you can know exactly who is calling, who to call, and what their title is.

HOW TO USE THE EDGE INDEX

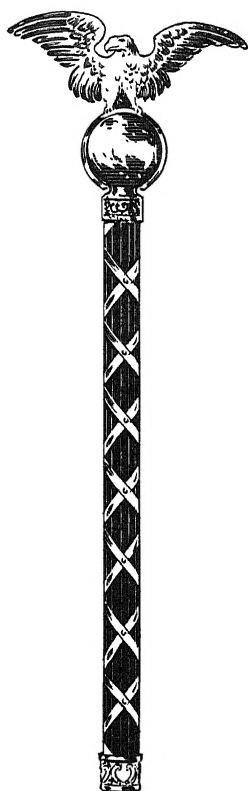

Choose the heading you want from the ready reference index at the right.

Bend the pages of the Congressional Staff Directory nearly double to expose the black edge symbols.

Match the index mark next to the heading with the symbol on the page edges. Open the book to the exact section you want.

Although some of the material in this Directory can be obtained in one form or another, from other sources, it is nowhere else available in the format or context in which it is presented here. It is especially the presentation of this material in a form developed to enhance its reference usefulness which is original in this book.

The biographical section of the Congressional Staff Directory is the result of extensive research and the application of carefully established standards of selectivity by The Editorial Board. The cooperation of the individual biographees in supplying the Board with detailed personal histories is most important to the success of this Directory. It is the hope of the Board of Editors that the publication of this information will not result in any unnecessary loss of privacy for these individuals. Therefore, this notice is given that the use of the names included in this work as canvassing or mailing lists or for solicitation is beyond the use intended in the sale of this book and if damage follows to the editor or publisher through mis-use of this Directory, legal action may be brought.

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION

This, the 1961 edition of the Congressional Staff Directory, is the third in our annual series of omnibus fact books about the key people on Capitol Hill . . . the Members, their professional staffs and the staffs of the committees and the subcommittees.

This directory is designed to be used as a desk book, instantly available. As the legislative director of one large trade association noted in a legislative report to his key members, "The Congressional Staff Directory fills a need for which there is no other publication available, and it has been accepted at once by most organizations concerned with Congressional matters. It could be of great help to you and to your Association since it presents detailed information on the entire Congressional staff as distinguished from the Members of Congress, themselves." This is as succinct a statement of our objectives as we could arrive at, ourselves.

Completely revised to reflect the 9 changes in the membership of the Senate and the 70 changes in the membership of the House of Representatives, the 1961 Congressional Staff Directory includes over 3,000 changes in status of professional staff personnel on the Hill. The biographical section has been brought up to date and increased by over 200. Data from the 1960 census is used throughout this third edition.

More favorable comments were received about the list of 4,500 cities and towns together with the number of the Congressional District and the name of the Congressman than about any other single feature of the Directory. The Editor appreciates the encouragement offered by so many users who wrote to tell us how they were using the book, how much time it saved them, and how we could improve this third edition.

In editing this book we have tried to assemble and organize the facts which my staff and I needed almost daily during my eight years in Congress . . . and which we often found difficult to locate and time-consuming to compile. To determine the contents of this Directory we have consulted with many who are studying Congress, working with Congress and writing about Congress. Their suggestions have expanded our original concept of the book to its present form, in which we hope it will prove a worthy companion to the excellent official volume, the Congressional Directory.

Since this Directory is not a government publication, the Board of Editors enjoys complete freedom of choice in assembling material solely on the basis of its usefulness to the reference user. The selection of those of the staffs who are given full biographical coverage is made entirely on the basis of such reference interest in them as individuals. No financial obligation accrues to those chosen for biographical coverage. It is impossible to buy a listing or otherwise influence the selection of the Board of Editors as to the inclusion of biographical material.

In the preparation of this book I am grateful for the helpful counsel and assistance of many, The Officers and Members of the House and Senate, and their staffs, the staff members of the committees and subcommittees and the Library of Congress and Government Accounting Office have been particularly gracious. Miss Ann Harshman, my secretary while I was in Congress, as Associate Editor of the Directory is largely responsible for the compilation of the changes in this, the third edition.

Once again, as in the Preface to the first and second edition, I wish to acknowledge the continuing advice and encouragement of Bruce Savage, H. Vernon Scott of Scott, Schuler & Simmons, and Samuel E. Stavisky of Samuel E. Stavisky & Associates. I wish to thank, also, Robert L. L. McCormick of Robert L. L. McCormick and Associates and Joseph B. McGrath, Director, Governmental Affairs Division, National Association of Home Builders. The typography in those sections of the book set on linotype is the work of Dwight Alexander of Fred B. Alexander, Typesetters, Indianapolis, Indiana. The choice of VariType faces for the sections of the book produced on Foto-List is a result of the counsel of Peter Doyle, formerly of the VariTyper Corporation in Washington.

TABLE OF ABBREVIATIONS

In a directory of this nature, abbreviations are necessary in the interest of compactness and economy. The Editors have tried to serve these purposes without abbreviating to the point where the advantage of brevity is offset by the strangeness of the artificial language which results. Insofar as there are established standards of abbreviations, they have been followed. This table is provided as a help to the reader and in explanation of some abbreviations which are peculiar to the Congressional Staff Directory such as the b. in the biographies meaning born, the s. meaning son of., the dau. for daughter of, the m. for married, etc. It should also be noted that, rather than repeat the biographee's last name several times in one brief sketch, the initial of his family name, only, is used after the first appearance of the full name.

* following a biographical sketch indicates either that the biography, as published, could not be checked against the proof mailed to the biographee prior to publication, or that elements of personal history contained in the sketch were secured from sources other than the biographee.

STAFF BIOGRAPHIES

NOTES ON THE STAFF BIOGRAPHIES

The Board of Editors selects these names of key staff personnel for individual biographical treatment primarily on the basis of their potential interest to serious users of this reference work. No financial obligation accrues to those selected for complete biographical coverage. It is impossible to buy a listing in the Congressional Staff Directory or to influence the selection of The Board of Editors.

After lists of staff members are secured from individual Senators, Representatives and the Committees, the names are screened by the Board and detailed biographical information questionnaires mailed to those who meet the high criteria set by the Editors. Thus, to a great degree, the information included about each biographee represents his or her own appraisal of accomplishments to date. In a very few instances, information obtained from authoritative sources has been included.

Once the sketch is rewritten to conform with the style of this book and set in type, a proof is mailed to the biographee for correction, up-dating and verification. In the few cases where deadlines made complete authentication impossible, this fact is indicated by an asterisk following the last word of the biographical sketch which calls attention to the fact that the subject of this personal history did not have time to approve the material before printing. In a few biographies, the address or certain elements of information have been omitted at the request of the individual.

FORMAT

The form of the biographical sketch has been planned to make possible a detailed personal history arranged in orderly sequence with due regard for compactness. Unusual abbreviations used are listed in a table included with the preliminary matter at the front of the book. The hypothetical biography below is intended as an example.
